Task Interface

While we know that each project looks different, this section showcases the task interface and the steps to follow.

1) When tasking as an attempter, the first section is for reminders/info for your specific project. Please note: as we progress, the content in these sections may change.

- Re-read the chat history, user prompt, and response. Familiarize yourself again with the task and read your response to determine how best to improve it.
- 3. Re-write your earlier response to be the best possible. You may be tempted to resubmit it without making significant or valid improvements, but we highly discourage you from doing this. Your response will return to the same reviewer as your initial attempt, so you should implement their feedback as effectively as possible. You should also make any additional changes or adjustments that would improve the response. Remember to follow all prompt aspects, provide depth and creativity, be accurate if appropriate, and format your response effectively.
- 4. Proofread your response to ensure that it addresses all of the feedback so it is stellar. ALWAYS proofread your response before you submit it. You likely catch multiple errors and spot multiple ways to improve it. It is ALWAYS worth it to make these changes and fixes when possible. We recommend referencing the above proofreading checklist before you submit it.
- 5. Submit your task!
- 2) Next, you have the Construct a Prompt Section. Much like the previous section, useful project-related information is shown here.

3) After the prompt section, your response section follows right after.

You'll need to write a response to the prompt. Place a strong emphasis on creativity in all tasks.

Use appropriate markdown formatting and ensure that your response is readable.
